About the topic

With the advent of the big data era, data has become an essential resource in today's business marketplace. Market participants have collected vast amounts of data and actively engaged in commercial utilization and development, creating enormous economic value. However, the unauthorized use by competitors in the markets has resulted in significant financial losses for the data collectors simultaneously. The protection loopholes and the development needs of the digital economy have put the urgent need for legal regulation of commercial data in front of us. This seminar will explore the current situation and legislative gap of commercial data protection under the existing legal framework. Ideas on legislation will also be discussed in the seminar.
